Letter from Kate

Our founder, Dr. John L. Peters, believed in the transformative powers of the human spirit to break the cycle of poverty, hunger and disease. Dr. Peters envisioned villagers around the world lifting themselves out of their own dire circumstances through education and training.

Sixty-six years later, World Neighbors (WN) is staying true to his vision of creating lasting changes rather than a short-term fix. We practice his model – not only in our work with villagers around the globe – but within the WN organization itself.

It is no secret that, when I began at WN in 2014, our organization had been through a few tough years. While we never stopped fulfilling our mission around the world, we had to work hard to regain our independence and financial stability. I have had the honor of watching as our dedicated board members, valiant staff and loyal stakeholders worked together to continue our work while strengthening the organization.

The accomplishments of the last year have been a clarion bell, announcing that WN once again stands strong and independent, fulfilling its mission with a dedication to best practices and hard work.

Our staff around the globe continue to fulfill our mission by helping communities identify and solve problems through cooperative relationships and sustainable solutions. As an organization, we are gaining public recognition through media coverage of our work, invitations to speak and participate at events, and through improved third-party evaluations of our practices.

- In 2017, WN was featured or referenced in the news around the world 47 times.
- Last year, WN staff spoke at over ten events and gatherings, including Lionel Vigil, our Regional Director for Latin America and the Caribbean, speaking at the Water Conference at the University of Oklahoma in September, 2017.
- Out of the 1.5 million nonprofit organizations in the US, fewer than 4,000 (0.3%) have a 4-Star rating from Charity Navigator and a Platinum rating from GuideStar. This year, WN joined those elite nonprofits, thanks to our dedication to best practices and transparency.

Just as Dr. Peters believed, it is the dauntless human spirit of our leaders, staff and volunteers that has helped WN achieve tremendous goals. The continued strength of our organization will support and enhance the transformative work we do in some of the world's most at-risk communities.

May we count on your continued financial support of WN for the remainder of fiscal year 2018?

With warm regards,

Where We Work and Overview

- 40 local partner organizations are currently supported. These local organizations, formed and managed by local communities with our help, carry on the work of WN after we transition out of an area.
- 531 villages and communities served by WN programming.
- 83,729 people received training, technical assistance or guidance from WN staff and volunteers.
- 472,351 people benefited from WN programs. This includes program participants as well as their children and other members of their households.
- 6,433 volunteers worldwide. These volunteers act as community mobilizers in their villages they are trusted members of their communities who operate as change models and innovation leaders.

One Man's Vision

WN was founded by Dr. John Peters in 1951, who, after serving in the Philippines in World War II, was determined to help end the suffering caused by poverty.

Since then, through our non-sectarian methodology, WN has worked in 45 countries, benefiting more than 26 million people. At present, our programs benefit close to 472,350 people living in rural, marginalized communities in 13 countries in ecologically fragile areas of Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean. WN programs are currently being delivered with and through the help of local partner organizations and some 6,400 community-based volunteers, involving about 84,000 program participants (the total number of 472,350 served includes family members and individuals directly impacted by community projects).

Latin America and the Caribbean

In 2016-2017, WN worked with more than 51,420 people in the Latin America and Caribbean (LAC) region, serving 126 communities in four nations: Bolivia, Guatemala, Haiti and Peru.

Programming focus points included: sustainable agriculture and farming innovations, community and reproductive health, capacity building, clean water, water conservation, waste water management and sanitation.

- In Bolivia, WN helped local volunteers install 62 bio-sand water filters in homes and schools, launched an ecological pest and disease control training program, constructed 19 circular wells and started three savings and credit (S&C) groups.
- In Guatemala, nearly 7,000 families are consuming clean water after last year's completion of two bio-sand water filter production plants in Atitlan and Jocotan.
- In Haiti, program participants were trained on the principles of basic micro businesses, learning how to manage small credits for agricultural activities and trade.
- Participants in Haiti learned how to purify and store clean water to prevent waterborne diseases, thanks to the installation of 50 bio-sand water filters and three artisanal water tanks this year.
- In Peru, with the help of 40 community volunteers, WN provided training and technical assistance to improve sustainable agriculture, community health and the environment to local farmers and their families in 32 communities, serving 2,862 people.
- Longtime WN Peru partner, Cooperative Los Chankas, has become an independent, sustainable organization, completing the WN five stages of development. WN is gradually ending funding, but will continue to provide technical support. Los Chankas has a membership of 835 associates (326 women and 509 men), who have access to savings, credit and financial literacy services that guarantee a self-sustaining income for the organization.

South Asia

In 2016-2017, WN worked with 30,921 people in South Asia, serving 125 villages and communities in two nations: India and Nepal.

Holistic development programs included: sustainable agriculture, livelihoods, agroforestry, community and reproductive health, water and sanitation, waste water management, capacity building of women, linking groups with local line agencies for accessing resources, increasing awareness about HIV/AIDS and strengthening S&C groups.

- In India, the local reproductive health clinic re-opened in June, 2016 in partnership with Ghoghardiha Prakhand Swarajya Vikas Sangh, a local partner. The clinic has created access, availability, and affordability of quality reproductive health services to rural residents, especially women and adolescent girls, who are often affected by fear of stigmatization, violence or discrimination.
- In India, WN worked with 55 WASH committees (including 20 new WASH committees), to continue training and education for 2,500 households on safe drinking water, hygiene and sanitation, advocacy, nutrition and reproductive health.
- In Nepal, 1,030 community members received services at four health camps in Kavre, Sindupalchok, Tanahu and Udaypur districts. These health camps generated mass awareness of the importance of regular health checkups.
- In Nepal, 834 households have expanded the area near their homes for fodder grass and trees and have planted more than 55,000 plants and trees. More than 1,180 households grew vegetable kitchen gardens for better nutrition for their families, while 148 of those households upgraded their kitchen gardens to grow enough vegetables to sell on a commercial scale.

Africa

More than 270,600 men, women and children benefited from WN's programming on the continent of Africa in 2017. WN worked in 159 communities in the following countries: Burkina Faso, Kenya, Mali, Tanzania and Uganda. Programming included: sustainable agriculture and rural livelihoods, community-based natural resource management, community and reproductive health and organizational strengthening.

- In Burkina Faso, WN helped organize educational talks to groups on hygiene and sanitation in seven villages, serving a population of more than 14,000 community members.
- In Kenya, WN worked with local organizations to provide health services to 2,709 patients from 22 villages. The services included cancer screenings, child growth monitoring, sensitization on preventable diseases such as cholera and malaria, voluntary counseling and testing for HIV and family planning.
- In Mali, the fishing cooperatives we work with were able to pay back a $738 cooperative loan to purchase fingerlings in 2015-16.
- In Tanzania, two programs continued to expand and strengthen livestock production (dairy goats, poultry and pigs) through the "passing on the gift" model. In one program, 45 piglets were passed on to other community members. This program has 72 farmers with more than 1,000 pigs.
- In Uganda, we coordinated 27 S&C groups with 842 active members that include vulnerable members of the community such as guardians of orphans and vulnerable children, the elderly, widows and people living with HIV.

Southeast Asia

In 2016-2017, WN worked with approximately 119,300 people in Southeast Asia, serving 121 villages and communities in two nations: Indonesia and Timor-Leste.

The Southeast Asia program focuses on building the resilience of the communities we work with so that they are more able to respond to the increased hardships they face from climate change. In both countries, WN's core approaches to sustainable agriculture, improving food security, and S&C are applied. In Indonesia, the focus is also on building the capacity of both the community and the local government in disaster risk reduction (DRR), while in Timor-Leste, WN is working to protect and conserve natural water sources.

- In Indonesia, the DRR project funded by the United States Agency for International Development's Office of U.S. Foreign Disaster Assistance in Nusa Tenggara directly benefited more than 35,000 community members, substantially exceeding the original target of 17,820.
- About 60% of Indonesia's total land mass is classified as State Forests that cannot be bought or sold. A multi-year WN project funded by the Ford Foundation supported residents of forest-based villages to gain legal access to their surrounding forests so that they can be used to increase both their economic status and improve their food security. When the project ended in mid-2017, it had exceeded its goals with 2,783 households (150% of the target) obtaining permits for 10,975 hectares (152% of the target).
- In Timor-Leste, WN has helped improve access to clean water for over 10,000 people across 30 communities.
- In Timor-Leste, slash and burn farming practices are still rife. This year, to prevent this practice, WN completed a series of community trainings in contour farming/terracing, soil and water conservation, organic farming and local food crop production for over 100 farmer groups with a membership of over 2,150.
